"We are in rather a mess now," he admitted, "owing to miscalculation on the part of the Government. They miscalculated the strength of the opposition that prevailed in Uister."

The amendment moved by Lord Lansdowne, providing for the total exclusion of Uister from home rule without time limit, was next adopted, 138 to 39.

without time limit, was next adopted, 138 to 39.

Lord Lansdowne, referring to the Marquis of Crewe's challenge Monday, said that the Opposition would not guarantee that Ulster's exclusion would prevent civil war. Things had come to such a pass in Ireland that it was impossible for anyone to guarantee what might happen there in the next few weeks, even days.

"But on the whole," he continued, "we are inclined to believe that this arrangement is more likely, than any other to provide relief from the present anxieties."

Text of Deleted Clause.

Following is the text of the clause eliminated from the amending bill by the Lords to-day:

the Lords to-day:

(1) If within three months after the date of the passing of this act a petition is presented to the Lord Lieutenant from any county in the Province of Ulster, demanding a poil under this act in that county with reference to the question of the temporary exclusion of that county from the county of the lord Lieutenant is satisfied that the petition is signed by not less than one-tenth of the Parliamentary electors in the county, the Lord Lieutenant shall cause a poil to be taken en that question of the Parliamentary electors in the county, in accordance with the provisions of this act.

(2) The question shall be submitted to the electors in the following form:—

election laws for the purpose of the taking of the poil.

(4) In this section the expression "county" means a Parliamentary county; but where a Parliamentary county is did not expressed by taking the purpose of the taken for the county as a whole, and not separately for each division, but a person shall not vote more than once at the poil, although registered in more than one division. This section shall apply to the Parliamentary boroughs of Belfast and London-derry as if they were separate counties, and as if the area of those boroughs were excluded from the area of the Parliamentary county.

For the purposes of this section the Par-liamentary borough of Newry shall be in-cluded in the Parliamentary county of Down.

Macdonnell Proposal Lost.

The amendment offered by Lord Macdonnell proposing a sort of home rule within home rule, by setting up a special Ulster council of fifty-two members to take over the chief, administrative work of the Province, was supported by moderates like Earl Loreburn and Baron Courtney, but was rejected on division by 196 to 20. Unionists Short-sighted.

Unionists Short-sighted.

Some heat was imparted into the debate by the Lord Chancellor, who charged the Unionists with not looking beyond the party view of the moment. He asserted that in the view of the Government home rule was the only solution, but he said they felt that the dangers of carrying out that solution must be met, and the bill was an attempt to meet them. Lord Bryce urged that Lord Macdonnell's scheme should be accepted as an alternative to that of exclusion, the difficulties surrounding which might, he thought, be insuperable.

Lord Curzon Frotests.

Iar too numerous, stated the Chief Constable. On the other hand, the Ontario Motor League felt that too many of their members were being unduly prosecuted. The foundation for such a belief was that the constables were paid on a commission basis, receiving three dollars for every summons that they issued for overspeeding, and, therefore, motorists were recklessly penalized. Lord Curzon Frotests.

Lord Curzon vigorously protested against the tone of the Lord Chancellor's speech. He pointed out that the present situation arose from the procrastination of the Government and from their inability to see things in the right light.

Speaking as a home ruler, Lord Weardale announced that he had reluctantly come to the conclusion that the exclusion of the whole Province of Ulster was the only thing to bring peace.

Story Obtained by Accident.

Bardes, the last witness to take the stand before the inquest was ended, was discovered only yesterday. His story might still remain untold had he not mentioned it, first to a woman, who promptly telephoned the District Attorney, and then to a Catholic priest he visited for advice. The priest urged Bardes to make his story known. But before an opportunity presented liself he was taken into custody by orders of the District Attorney. Bardes testified to-day after Mrs. Carman's twelve-year-old daughter Elizabeth had tried to strengthen her mother's alibt, and representatives of the manufacturers of the telephonic instrument had old of selling the device to the physician's wife and of installing it in her home.

Coroner Norton, after spending an hour studying the testimony of Bardes and other witnesses, wrote out his

Coroner Norton, after spending an hour studying the testimony of Bardes and other witnesses, wrote out his charge and ordered Mrs, Carman's arrest.

By this Mr. Robertson added that be meant that the league could station their own men along the various roads on Saturdays and holidays so that motorists might be warned if they were going too fast. The warning is given by a sign which the men wear, and which reads, "Slow down." This has saved many from prosecution this summer.

Regarding the decrease in prosecutions this season, Mr. Robertson attributed it to the poor condition of the roads, which was hindering fast driving. He did not believe it was due to the corefulness of the constables or to reluctance on the part of the motorists to speed.
