BRITISH EQUISER SUNK BY A GERMAN MINE

The Amphion Goes Down With a Loss of 130 Men

Had Taken Part on the Previous Day in the Attack on the German Mine-laying Vessel Koenigin Luise—How the Lance Destroyed German Boat.

LONDON, Aug. 6, 10.50 p.m.—An Admiralty report says that the British cruiser Amphion was sunk this morning by striking a mine. Paymaster J. T. Gedge and 130 men were lost. The Captain, sixteen officers and 135 men were saved.

A previous report says that the German mine-layer Koenigin Luise had probably placed some mines before was sunk by the British ocean-going destroyer

Light Truiser.

The Amphion was a light cruiser of 3,440 tons. She was attached to the third destroyer flotilla, under Captain Cecil H. Fox. commanding officer. Her regular complement was 292 men. She was commissioned in April, 1913. In The Globe of yesterday a report was published that the Amphion had returned to Harwich with the third destroyer flotilla after a brush with the enemy, and that she had been damaged. The view at the Admiralty is that the Amphion struck one of the mines laid by the Koenigin Luise before the latter vessel was sunk by the Lance.

The Lance fired only four shots. The first destroyed the bridge of the steamer, the third and fourth tore away the stern, and the Koenigin Luise was caught in the act of laying mines some sixty miles from Harwich.

The Lance is one of the newest types of destroyers, developing 27,000 horse-power, with a speed of 33 knots. She is armed with three 4-inch quickfirers, and burns oil. Her tonnage is firers, and burns oil. Her tonnage is 1,100, and her complement 100 men.

ANSWERING THE CALL

LONDON, Aug. 6, 11.50 p.m.—The passage of a war budget for $500,000,000 in the House of Commons to-day without a dissenting voice, and the granting of an army increase of 500,000 men, in accordance with the wishes of Lord Kitchener, the new Minister of War, show that Great Britain has put her hand to the plow.

A call to arms issued by the War Office to-night says an addition of 100,000 men to the regular army is needed immediately, and that "Lord Kitchener is confident this appeal will at once be responded to by all who have the safety of our Empire at heart."

The term of service for the new men is to be three years, or until and thirty. The naval estimates provide for 67,000 additional officers and men, which will make the navy's strength 218,000 men

ITALY RESENTS CHARGE OF BROKEN FAITH

Italian Ambassador in London Says r Neutrality is in Strict Ach Letter and Spirit of Her

f the German check at Liege has immense, particularly so as regards Italy. In view of the report, which is not yet confirmed, that Germany has sent an ultimatum to that power, the Ambassador of Italy here issued a statement as follows:--

"First: The neutrality of Italy in ter of self-interest, but is in strict ac cord with both the letter and spirit of her obligations under terms of the Triple Alliance.

"However unpopular a which she fought side by side with Germany and Austria might have been in Italy, the Italian Government

"Second: Everyone who reads the blue book just published can see how many and how earnest have been the efforts of Italy to maintain the peace of Europe, and that in this matter she was in complete sympathy with Britain.

she was in complete symmetry.

"The rupture that has since taken place was a calamity which it was not in Italy's power to avert."

In Italy's power to avert.

This despatch indicates that Italy is fully determined not to join forces with Germany and Austrip. The reference to the unpopularity of the war waged in company with the other powers of the Triple Alliance will be little relighed at Berlin and Vienna. Italy's defection from the Alliance is a far more serious affair for Germany than it yet appears, for it permits France to concentrate all her armies in the north, and it forces Austria to maintain corps of observation on the Italian frontier, less Italy should take a notion toward the redemption of Italia irredenta.

of a naval fight in the North Sea which suggest that the rumor has a basis of truth.

There is great excitement all along the east coast. Kirkwall reports tell of prolonged firing to the eastward. The Orkneys and Kirkcaldy make similar reports, and say that the firing appeared to be off the Firth of Forth.

Official confirmation of these reports, however, is entirely lacking.

WAR SUMMARY

NEWS OF BATTLE on the high seas comes in fragmentary but apparently official form from London early this morning. The British fleet encountered the German high seas fleet last night, and a general engagement was begun. The German fleet is retiring in the direction of the Dutch coast. The detailed story of the battle may be a some time to-day unless the pursuit carrie one British ships into northern waters. If the British fleet can manocuvre to a position northward of the enemy and cut him off from the estuary of the Elbe the action may prove decisive.

THE BRITISH CRUISER AMPHION was sunk off Harwich yesterday by contact with a mine, and 130 men of her crew were killed or drowned as a result of her loss. She was undoubtedly the victim of the big German liner Queen Louise, sunk on Wednesday off Harwich by the destroyer Lance while mine-laying. The Queen Louise must have sent adrift some mines before she was discovered, and with one of them the Amphion collided. The disaster gives an indication of the danger lurking everywhere, and of the fate that may at any moment overtake even the greatest of Britain's battleships. The disaster is not relatively serious, except as it involves the death of many trained men who leave friends behind to mourn their loss. Britain has an overwhelm-

THE STRUGGLE GOES WELL in the North Sea despite the tragedy of the Amphion. It is officially announced that the east coast of England from Hull to London has been made safe for British shipping, and that fishing vessels may proceed as far north as Iceland. Behind this bald statement lies much to be inferred. A cordon of British commerce protectors must be stretched across the North Sea from the coast of Holland to the English coast. The Straits of Dover must be held so strongly that no German ships can pass either inward or outward.

NINETEEN GERMAN WARSHIPS SUNK?

LONDON, Aug. 6.—There are persistent reports

Incoming fishing boats brought the first cohesive stories of fighting to Lowestoft. The fishermen said they had seen a lively battle between the destroyers. After that there was a succession of reports from east coast towns that orders had been issued for the preparation of hospitals. A shipowner at Whitby has announced that he has been informed that a great battle has been fought, and nineteen German warships have been sunk. The people of Hull, Grimsby and Harwich are convinced of the truth of this reported ing superiority in light cruisers.
